In Memory of George Floyd: Wall Hanging

2020

Roughly 40x 19 at widest.

I created this wall hanging during June after the killing of George Floyd on May 25th, 2020. Due to Covid19 restrictions, I did not feel able to attend the Black Lives Matter protests, so I decided to do a weaving to express my support of this movement and to express of my sadness and thoughts about the killing.

I believe that there are many ways that a person can change their circumstances, for example by getting more education or training. However, one of the things that is nearly impossible to change is a person's skin color. Wherever you go, it is always with you and obvious to all with whom you are interacting. And yet on the inside, both physically and psychologically, we are the same. We have the same range of desires, goals, feelings, and abilities.

The warp threads symbolize the different colors of peoples' skin with a predominance of dark colors. Woven through them is mesh tubing filled with red yarn-symbolizing the blood running through our arteries. The wall hanging is meant to show how we are all the same inside even though our skin color is different.
